

Dennis Wilson Adjunct Professor Notre Dame C.V.

Arbitrator and Mediator

The University of Notre Dame Australia

University of Sydney

Sydney, Australia

I am an arbitrator and mediator. My work generally includes difficult cases in both fact and law. My work has developed into dealing in matters of high value or involving significant principle. My aim therefore is to achieve expeditious, economic and just results. I endeavor as much as the case permits to identify core issues, the determination of which often lead to the resolution of whole disputes. I am a long-standing member of the legal profession in Australia and I am admitted to the Singapore International Commercial Court as a Foreign Lawyer. I understand the procedural and evidentiary approaches to arbitration in Civil and Common Law jurisdictions. I advise governments and governmental bureaucracies on legislative review and policy development and implementation in environmental law and in the mining and resources sectors. I have developed a particular interest in Energy Charter Treaty law and dispute resolution and WTO dispute resolution which developed from receiving, quite by chance, a brief to advise in each of those areas.
